Proceed with Caution

Never participate in ads or paid offers that pop up on your computer screen asking you to participate in polls or surveys to receive prizes or rewards. These scams may steal your personal information and if you offer your credit card number it may be stolen. MDTC/MTC never approaches customers with offers or pop up surveys like these.

Never provide your username and/or password for your email account if you receive a random email from an address that looks like it is from MDTC/MTC technical support or with an attachment. MDTC/MTC will never request this type of information in this manner.

It is always best to be safe and delete any suspicious email messages or contact MDTC to verify its legitimacy.

Scammers are also using the phone to try to break into your computer claiming to be from well-known companies like Microsoft. They say they have detected viruses or malware on your computer and trick you into giving them remote access to your computer or paying for software you don't need.

Always be cautious to protect yourself from scam artists and phishing attacks.
